This presentation concerns very caring adoptive parents who brought Anabel home to join their family when she was just an infant. At age six, there were four main presenting issues that I noted during the 4 Segment Evaluation and the first few play sessions:

1. Attachment issues: Although she was a very bright girl, Anabel was struggling both socially and academically at school. It seemed that her anxiety was causing cognitive impairment and social awkwardness. Her insecure, ambivalent, and anxious attachment included clinging to her mother.
2. Affect Regulation: Anabel, who was normally quiet and shy, exhibited a contrasting behavior of loud tantrums and she would say mean things when she did not get her way at home or with friends.
3. The therapist noted that the parents were uncomfortable discussing Anabel's adoption with her. The parents, particularly the mother, seemed to have unfinished business around creating this lovely family.
4. Anabel usually chose sandtrays to express feeling ungrounded and confused. Her play metaphors are very expressive!

This presentation will demonstrate the power of Trauma Reality Sandtrays unfolding parallel to the child's individual play therapy sessions. This experience is especially valuable when there are symptoms that are not getting relieved over a period of time, arising from a range of causes such as insecure or anxious attachment, dissociation, history of medical trauma, abuse, neglect, problems arising from adoption or foster care, etc. This presentation can be applied to a wide range of issues of trauma and general stuckness in children ages 3-12. In addition, it can be adapted to use for teenagers.

The Trauma Reality Sandtray is a tool that offers a deeper level of healing for both the child and the family. It is offered here as part of working with children who dissociate. The presentation demonstrates not only symptom relief, but deeper lasting healing and a solid theoretical framework. Through sandtray pictures and video excerpts of actual therapy sessions, we will see examples of Anabel's play and sandtray therapy. We will read her expressive metaphors – including metaphors of feeling stolen – which are frequently in the play therapy of children who have joined the family through adoption. Gradually, Anabel becomes less confused about her adoption and more grounded in her world.

The focus will be on how the process deeply impacts the parents as well as the child. We will see how unfinished business was transmitted to the daughter through unconsciously displaced emotions. In psychodynamic theory this is called Silencing. The combination of play therapy and Trauma Reality Sandtray offers a way to break through to a depth regarding trauma that I have not found otherwise accessible.

This LIVE presentation was given June 2017 PA-APT National Conference, Pittsburgh and February 3, 2018 GA-South APT National Conference, Savannah with high satisfaction at both events.

Highlights

The presentation of this mindful approach to play therapy includes a Power Point Presentation, Sandtray slides, and video segments covering play therapy, parent child interaction during “Talk Time”, affect regulation, mindful parenting meetings, how to instruct parents in Trauma Reality Sandtrays, and how to prepare them to engage their child for deeper level healing. We will address how the trauma connects to the brain. Hours count towards Sandtray Certificate Program /Family Play Therapy Center. See brochure for more information. (fptcenter.com/brochures). Hours are APT contact hours.

Learning Objectives

1. Participants will understand how Trauma Reality Sandtrays allow for deeper level healing in play-family therapy experience and they will view how to use them with very challenging families.
2. Participants will learn or enrich a clinical framework for working with anxious or traumatized children building on the Play Therapy experience – ideally, without medication.
3. Participants will gain or enrich their skill, through theory and video demonstration, in the use of Sandtray Play Therapy when working with attachment or anxious / traumatized children.
4. Participants will learn or enrich their skill to use some family therapy concepts that help to get to the roots of child’s presenting problems presenting in play therapy.
5. Participants will have an interactive experience, viewing videos of a child’s sandtray play therapy process, which demonstrate the theory.
6. Through family play therapy we will see how through silence, by not being verbalized, trauma can travel from the parents’ unconscious minds to the child’s unconscious mind.
